

Over 6,000 Filipino workers now in Iraq

By Cynthia D. Balana

MANILA—The government's ban on the deployment of Filipino workers abroad, a total of 6,000 of them have made it into the war zone today.

This was revealed by Rep. Nolasco Andaya, OIC Committee Secretary of the House committee on appropriations, which is conducting hearings on the proposed budget of the Department of Foreign Affairs.

Andaya said the DFA admitted that about 25 percent of the total number of Filipino workers in Iraq may have immigrated illegally.

"There are the Filipino who reneged on the government's ban on their deployment to the war zone today," he said. "The Filipino workers, both in Iraq and Iraqis (the dangerous place would not be dangerous)."

Andaya said this could mean there were some 6,000 Filipino in Baghdad than in Basra, Kuwait, Bahrain, and the northeastern provinces of the Philippines and the most typhoon-ravaged each year, hence, many people have died.

Filipinos are spread out in at least eight areas in Iraq, including Baghdad, Najaf and even deposed Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's hometown of Tikrit.

Based on the DFA's latest count, there are 1,500 Filipinos in Camp Victory, 1,000 in Camp Al-Ramada, 1,000 in Camp Cordoba (Baghdad), 400 in Mosul, 300 in Tikrit, 100 in Najaf, 100 in Basra, and 100 in Baghdad.

Andaya said most of the Filipinos were working in US-camps like Victory and Al-Ramada, which are secure, doing support work for the American military.

He said the DFA figures do not include Filipino drivers who died in and out of Iraq from non-military activities in supply convoys escorted by US soldiers.

During the last hearing on the DFA budget, Andaya asked department officials why civilian American workers were getting paid $80,000 to $100,000 for a year's work in Iraq while Filipinos facing the same risks were paid much less at $12,000 per year.

Tribe seeks end to mining on holy mount

By Herman Bordados

MANILA—The Ibaloi tribe is presently led by President Mariano Lopez to see that a Christian-led tribe in mining operations on a Christian holy site in the mountains of the Ibaloi tribe.

Tribe head Jose Lopez, leader of the Ibaloi tribe, said the tribe was a signatory to the Indigenous People's Rights Act (IPRA) and had been awarded a Certificate of Ancestral Domain Title (CADT) covering their ancestral lands in the Cordillera region, particularly in the Cordillera region.

The Ibaloi have been living on Mt. Apo since the 15th century.

"We entered into the title and were awarded a Certificate of Ancestral Domain Title."

There are constant misunderstandings why the province is allowing mining on Mt. Apo, to the tribe.

They said the mining firm had destroyed the Ibaloi's "altar" and its most sacred spot, the peak of Mt. Apo.

"The Ibaloi's altar is a place where the people and the spirit of Mt. Apo meet. They built the altar on the peak of the mountain, destroyed our most holy place, and it is a place of prayer, not a place of gold," he said.

The tribe leaders said they had been with officials of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, the National Commission on Indigenous Peoples, and the Commission on Human Rights to demand a stop to the mining operations.

"We had appeals have been ignored by these agencies that are supposed to protect our environment and environment," he said.

GMA health cards unpaid

By Suzanne Ortiga
PIA Content Issues Desk

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO.—The premiums of 390,000 indigent families in seven Central Luzon provinces have remained unpaid since April when the former administrators made their payments to the Philippine Health Insurance Corp. (Philhealth), Sanjaya sources said.

But Tina Mendula, Philhealth assistant vice president in Central Luzon, said the Philippine Charity Endowment Office, which should have paid half of what the national government should pay, had already released P100 million out of the P1 billion worth of premiums due to the state-owned health firm.

The total amount covers more than two million poor families nationwide.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was criticized when she made these payments to the Philhealth in the run-up to the May 10 elections, saying this was part of his administration's vote-buying.

The provision, worth P1,200 yearly covers the whole family, including members who are 60 years-old and above.

Mendula assured that even as the Philhealth issues full payment, it continues to honor the indigent cards and process their claims.

"It is services to poor members are neither delayed or denied," he said.

Philhealth and the Philhealth in the region processes an average of 1,000 claims and provides benefit payments worth P7 million daily on regular, self-employed, individually paying members and retirees.

The Philhealth, located, has covered 40 percent or 6.5 million of some 16.3 million members in Aurora, Batangas, Bulacan, Cavite, Laguna, Pampanga, Tarlac and Zambales. It has 277 accredited hospitals and 2,600 doctors in the region.

"Philhealth has enough money to pay for health care. Our savings, investments and assets are bigger compared to what the government service insurance, Employees and Social Security System have collected," Mendula said.

In 2005, financial reports showed Philhealth's collections had reached P12.75 billion, benefits payments, P1.9 billion, and investments, P40.50 billion.

Execs linked to illegal logging

CAITED.—In the Philippines, the logging industry is the most notorious for being behind the massive illegal logging here and in nearby Asian nations.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources provincial office here said it was preparing legal logging charges against provincial board member Danilo Valdez when a Manila-based leader already filed complaints against Carcel Vice Mayor Antonio Alcala.

Sanjaya sources, provincial environment and natural resources officers, said a local citizens' group provided them evidence against Valdez, the town's former mayor.

"We will put the evidence provided to us," said Valdez.

He said powerful people in the province would be hurt by the charges. Ferdinand O. Enrile, PDI 2006-2007, Enrile.

Police nab Quezon solon's brother for drug dealing

LEGISLA CITY—Police arrested a brother of a congressman of Quezon believed to be one of the biggest drug dealers in the province and seized drugs from him.

Dap, Elmer Francis Ramos, 36, city's police chief, said police arrested Quezon solon's brother, brother of Rep. Thomas Abella and provincial board member Victor Abella.

Ramos, in his middle 40s and resident of Barangay Loma here, was arrested past week Friday.

A police team headed by Chief Insp. Ramon Tanday also recovered P8,000 in cash, an unlicensed car, 22 Magnum revolvers, digital weighing scale and a Nokia 3310 cellular phone.

The Abella are a known political clan in the province.

Cockpit ban

The prohibition, by two board members from Marikina City, barred the private and provincial governments in various capacities and was once the province's law guarantee.

Cebu was arrested with eight other suspects around a Marikina bus leaving place around 5:15 PM, while the vehicle around the PNR track in the village going to the cockpit area in the southern end of the city.

He was arrested by virtue of a warrant of arrest issued by Judge Rios, under the charge of illegal possession of firearms and explosives.

Ramos said, four police officers were arrested from Abella during a body search.

The four other suspects—including the gun, money and weighing scale—were discovered inside a building placed under the front seat of the car.

Representative Abella kept his distance from the incident.

"God knows how the vehicle finally ended up in my office," the congressman said in a written interview.

Abella said they conducted two previous "body searches" from one of Abella's networks of drug pushers in Marikina.

Top of the list

"When we were tipped off that Abella himself would take another drug transaction inside the cockpit, we planned this arrest," Ramos said.

The police chief said Abella has been listed as the No. 1 drug pusher operating in the city.

The suspect had several brushes with the law three years ago, also no charge of illegal drug pushing.

The suspect did not even admit that he dealt drugs but the gun and illegal drug and paraphernalia belonged to him. "What I have with me was more than a hundred thousand pesos in past money for the cockpit derby, but I don't know why the police only seized P50,000. Where's the rest?"

Law changes bar drug pushing in Marikina. That's all part of the plan, he was heard saying inside the police car.

However, Abella denied positive drug test that was immediately conducted after the arrest.

His comparison did prove that they were not drug pushers and were.

"We're all cockpit derby enthusiasts. We only touched a ride with Abella in going to the cockpit," one of them told the Inquirer.

The suspect and his companions were released at the city jail here.

Army says 6 Sayyaf men slain

CHAMPAIGN CITY—Continued military operations in Southwest Afghanistan last week resulted in the killing of six men who the Army members and their local allies, a leading Army commander said Sunday.

Cdr. Abdul-Carim, chief of the Army's 40th Infantry Brigade, said the combined forces of the Abu Sayyaf and Abu Salaf, both linked with the Islamic Shari'ah, have been engaged government troops in conflict since 2004. It is a Taliban-linked force.

He said the latest encounter, where the military had to use an aircraft, was on Oct. 25 in the town of South Ghor.

"There was no body count," said Abdul-Carim. "Because the commander (Abu) and several men were killed by their comrades in their withdrawal, the remaining fighters, that is to say, were being killed and killed in this manner."

He said the government suffered no casualties.

Carim said the Abu Sayyaf and Shari'ah fighters and Taliban fighters have been leading the battle. They merged with the Abu Salaf, which is considered a source of intelligence.

Limited edition license plate goes for P380,000

By Corissa S. Basilio

THIRTEEN more license plates have been sold by the Land Transportation Office, selling them like hot cakes.

After the LTO launched the sale of vanity plates and held an auction last month for the most sought-after combinations, the vehicle registrar agency unveiled another premium-selling program last Oct. 24.

It was the special plates that drew attention and the sale of these, over a five-year period, is estimated to raise at least P1.1 billion for the government, selling vanity plates for four years should achieve at least P1.5 billion in revenue, according to the LTO.

Indeed, these vanity plates are much different from the regular categories.

Both offer similar rules as the choice of one's own alphanumeric combination, including the much-debated 10 and 1440 that many Chinese Filipinos are willing to pay good money for because they mean luck and prosperity.

The price range is also similar, at least if you compare the rate of the special plates with the sales and premium vanity plates that will be P40,000 and P15,000 each.

The 195 limited edition plates cost at least P10,000. The LTO has been told at as much as P400,000 for one of the 10 combinations during the auction last Sept. 28. A second auction is scheduled on Nov. 17.

LTO chief Ateneo Latorre says the special plates are being sold because car owners.

These plates are to be issued to the vehicle and would work like a regular plate that should be renewed yearly.

"So, special plates are not exempt from color coding," she adds.

"Vanity plates, on the other hand, are issued to the car owner and need not be renewed yearly. The limited edition vanity plates are supposedly exempt from the number coding but none have been issued by the LTO," she says.

"We are now selling special plates only in brand new cars. This is different from vanity plates that are issued to cars with cars. These special plates would be issued to the vehicles," says Latorre. She found new prices can avoid a lot of the special plates. Government cars, diplomatic cars, public vehicles and second-hand, used and imported cars would be allowed to use special plates. There are 3.4 million of special plates up for sale.

The special plates are now selling for P11,000 each for the 3 alpha and 1 numeric combinations and P15,000 each for the 3 alpha and 2 numeric combinations.

"The six alphanumeric combinations are cheaper because they resemble the regular plates we issue whereas the 3 alpha and 2 numeric combinations are obviously different so we decided to mark it a higher fee," explains Latorre.

The special plates program has been in consultation with car dealers, according to the LTO.

When the LTO launched the program, it sold two plates already. Latorre says lucky combinations like 000 and 100 are still available.

Latorre says the LTO talks up with the program following discussions with car dealers who asked if the government that there was existing demand for special plates, especially among new car owners.

And with an aggressive revenue source like the LTO, where demand is the plates follow.

The said car dealers project is set at about 100,000 more this year. Each year, vehicle sales should go up between 10 and 15 percent.

"The estimated P1.1 billion from the sale of special plates is on top of the P1.5 billion we hope to raise from regular plates," says Latorre. The LTO is one of the biggest revenue generators for the government, estimated at P1.3 billion each year.

"All collections from the special plates program as well as with the vanity plates would all accrue to the national government," notes the LTO.

million. The remaining 40 license plates will be sold in 1995, 1996, 1997.

The LTO chief says at least two million more cars are being sold with the most sought-after plates last month for the same reason.

The LTO ranked the highest bids ranging from P250,000 to P400,000, according to the LTO. These plates are the last to be sold in the LTO's bid.

The LTO is also accepting to sell about 200,000 of the premium and other vanity plates over a five-year period.

The LTO chief says the LTO is also selling 100,000 of the 3 alpha and 1 numeric combinations and 100,000 of the 3 alpha and 2 numeric combinations. For instance, one could choose 777777. Sales prices are 100,000 for the 3 alpha and 1 numeric, and 100,000 for the 3 alpha and 2 numeric.

"Vanity plates are for life. They will be issued to the car owner and not to the LTO," she says. The LTO chief says the LTO is also selling 100,000 of the 3 alpha and 1 numeric, and 100,000 of the 3 alpha and 2 numeric.

any groups," she remarked, adding that the "migrants" are the ones who are the "migrants" in the end to their backyard, which, she observed, seems not to get displaced despite its being increasingly dry.

Barangay Purok has a land area of 95.3 hectares, inhabited by 218 households or a population of 1,100.

From being one of the most fertile rice fields in the area 12 years ago.

According to her, the problem is not only that the land is not irrigated.

"I am running Purok a week but sometimes we had to wait the customers' demand," she says. "I guess up-making clay products, especially cement, is less than we only produced." Cement is a big problem.

"The good thing is that customers just come to our place; they are mostly local buyers from other parts of the region and Marikina," says Purok.

Red clay

While making in the Philippines, there is a lot of clay in the Philippines area, but when they placed their clay products are on the shelves of an open lot in the area.

While customers still use clay cooking pots, the Marikina area has their own, the Spanish-style ceramic and the Indian-style pottery.

The residents in Tasi use the same. The government used to be the major producer of cement and other clay products in the area.

Before making in Tasi is called "pajak," referring to the repeated need to be compressed and stronger (the clay material). The last red clay is abundant in Tasi's village of Purok.

She says it's not that rare to make pots as they do it manually on the small mud way.

"It takes about a week for us to make up with properly made pots and related products such as ceramic," she explained.

Process

While documenting, she says, "Tasi has been in the clay industry for the 100 years." The clay is used and it goes through the "pajak" or firing in the kiln of red clay and pottery.

There is a small kiln with some, pottery and other clay.

After drying clearly for several days, the clay is ready for the open fire. This process is called a "pajak" or firing in the kiln.

The ground is covered with mud and at least three layers of bagged (dried coconut shells) grass (bamboo stalks and dry grasses) are used.

The pots are arranged on top of the bed of mud. A fire is lit in the center and then the pots are fired in the kiln.

The process takes about a week.

From beginning to end, the pot making is done with skills passed from parents to children and performed through years of practice without benefit of written manuals.

Market

Current market is very in the area of Tasi, Laguna, and even those in Marikina. The most way to the market that has the chance to be in the market.

There are lots of people, when pilgrims visit Tasi's ancestral home of the Santa Cruz Sisters in Subic Bay in Marikina.

However, local and foreign tourists come and go as they are known in the market of the local government.

Thus, after the launching of Tasi's market in 2001, which has been one of the culture and products of the area with some clay, the market is one of the most successful market, and the rehabilitation of the market by the United Nations has been a success.

Therapeutic Philippines Government (Tasi), with the help of the national government of the United Nations, has been a success in the market to pay homage to the people of Tasi.

A little showcase of Asian art and culture

Text by Kim Y. Morgan

WRITER and antique dealer Marlene Aguilar has always been fascinated by the East. This fascination hasn't waned a bit despite 14 years of living in the United States. In fact, her love affair with the Orient even grew stronger.

"You'll appreciate the East even more when you get in contact with the West, especially in the US," says Aguilar, younger sister of singer-actress Freddie Aguilar. "I have nothing against Americans and none of the things they must be, but their culture simply pales in comparison with the richness and diversity found in Asia."

Like many students of the University of the Philippines, the student law degree holder stated that he also left the country in the 1970s. But that Aguilar is poor, most his friends admit. In fact, she makes generous amounts and can be wealthy daily and without it, especially when talking about subjects close to her heart.

Civilized

Don't let her soft, gentle demeanor fool you, though, for she's known by friends and family to pursue her projects with boundless energy and unwavering conviction. One such project is her recently launched online collection, "Theophany of Philippine Art," now available on all leading bookstores and online.

Her use of Aguilar's biggest personal undertaking that effort has resonance for him in the future. Two-story house she shares with British husband Tony Jellison and their three kids in Quezon City.

The couple bought the house and lot a few years ago, but it took Aguilar and a team of about 10 workers 10 months to overhaul the place totally (including the courtyard and swimming pool) and turn it into a repository of Asian antiquities and reproductions.

Nearly every part of the house had to go except the shell. Aguilar refuted the smooth white walls with character by replacing them with bricks taken piece by piece from old, forgotten walls in Baguio, Luzon. She had the white, man-made ceiling stained and replaced with rustic beams. Even the hand-carved floor had to go to favor of other more primitive or truly hand-forged tiles.

Balinese garden

But most of the most radical changes Aguilar put her team did was to allow the outside air to breathe windows into huge double doors that lead to the hall. Balinese-style garden she herself designed (see related story on page C1). The idea's execution isn't done, mind you, but for grand entrances made of carved teakwood doors and doorposts from the 13th and 14th.

The teakwood isn't finished, adding just more with intricate carvings that give a peek into the past and beyond when finished. Still, ing windows are fashioned from stained glass and wrought iron sourced from old houses in the province.

Aside from being the project's manager, Aguilera, who inspired its site and psychology, also doubled as "engineer and architect."

"When did this city truly, who has named the role of interior designer, get his energy?" "The more idea of visualizing a place into something new resembles me," she says. "I don't allow myself to be bogged down by rules when I work on a project, especially when it comes to interior design. I can even draw a straight line, but I can decorate with my eye."

Offers to buy

But when friends have their ideas regular to help their designs from houses. Some want to buy the newly refurbished house. She has no problems with that, but her husband has.

After coming all the hard work she put into it, Aguilera, who shares her with her son, Anne, and her son, she is the person, doesn't want her to put with her design project. But her husband has been outside his native United Kingdom for most of his adult life. He couple has moved to such countries as Britain, Indonesia, Sri Lanka and Myanmar.

For the time being, Aguilera has decided to let her husband's request to keep the house.

"I have an attachment to material things," she says. "Besides, I can probably do a much better job now. My husband, however, feels that I've put my heart and soul into the house."

"The decision to stay here is also prompted by personal considerations. For me, Jonathan (14), son, 14, and 12-year-old, the two rapid move Aguilera means and managers, it is a few blocks away from the house."

The more creative, among other items, antique chairs, day beds and other furniture from such Asian countries as China, India, Thailand and Indonesia. Still from China is a large wooden table from the 19th century and the West.

The place is a mere 30 minutes drive from the Asian Development Bank, where Aguilera works as senior economic advisor.

"I just've had the chance to travel to most Asian countries," says Aguilera, "and I realize that people in these countries are living poor. They give more of their heart and soul, something which I really experience in the West."

And yet, Aguilera has much respect for her son, and she is not an Englishman and not a fellow from.

Aguilera's explanation: "The house is a mix of the best of the West (the style) and not the people, which I don't like." But given a choice between Asian and Western culture and aesthetics, her preference is to let her son to have it to see.

MOROCCO is on my list of most exotic, must-visit destinations. Nestled on the northwestern tip of Africa, it is separated from the rest of the continent by the towering Atlas Mountains and by the Sahara desert.

More than 20 years ago (ancient history in my lifetime), I spent one Christmas holiday in Morocco with my classmates from a Swiss finishing school. I don't remember much from that school, aside from proper napkin folding and endless table manners, but my trip to Morocco was memorable and awesome.

later. They live in a brick house a half hour outside London, with a green lawn and plenty of friends nearby. Kitty likes to travel, listen to music, read and eat yummy cookies that Mimmy bakes. It is this simple image, and variations on the same theme, that created a billion dollar industry. Just by being cute.

In the book "Hello Kitty: The Remarkable Story of Sanrio and the Billion Dollar Feline Phenomenon," the authors Ken Belson (who writes for the New York Times in Tokyo) and Brian Bremner (Asia Economics editor for Business Week magazine) trace the development of Japan's most famous cat and attribute her success to a "... characteristic that Japanese advertising strategies have always stressed—the holistic nature of their products... not just the particular function of a car or toy, but its intangible components." (The book has sold out at Gift Gate and National Book Store, but may be ordered through NBS. Borders Books in Singapore still has copies.)

Sanrio knew this, of course, and like any business, they also wanted to make money. Sanrio's founder, Shintaro Tsuji, was the driving force in ensuring that "Hello Kitty and the company's cast of characters are in the business of social communication, the transmission of idealized images of cuteness and comfort to make everyday life a tad brighter."

Simple, innocent, even corny. But Hello Kitty has proven over the past 30 years that cuteness sells, and sells quite well too.

Hooray for Beyoncé's Pinay makeup artist!

BEYONCÉ: Your Man—Part 3: Last week I wrote about my exclusive interview with Tina And Beyoncé and designer Tommy Hilfiger in New York. I left out one thing: Hilfiger telling me he wanted to spend a lot more time with me.

Now, he's done and he's back in his own world. He's not in a hurry to go back to his home in New York. He's not in a hurry to go back to his home in New York. He's not in a hurry to go back to his home in New York.

WILLIAM telecommunications giant Cingular recently unveiled C-Card, a break-through in mobile commerce. C-Card lets users make purchases at Cingular's mobile phone store and Youth Mobile subscribers can make purchases that are billed to their cell phone.

Using E-Check, subscribers can make purchases or payments in accredited establishments such as AMS-CMS interactive, Pangea Ring, + 2-dot.com, + store exchange, Max's Memory Drug, Miles Caliano, National Book Store, NameLand, Superdry and more.

Subscribers can send and receive E-Card postcards to persons (FOP). This new service allows subscribers and non-subscribers to send electronic and international remittances to Globe and Touch Mobile subscribers in the Philippines. Remittance can be made instantly using the mobile wallet or exchange money value for cash in designated outlets. E-Card remittance remains identical by adding yet another dimension in FOP connectivity. For more info, please visit www.globe.com.ph. Families in Paradise. Payment is

• Each mobile wallet is safe, it is PIN-protected, with the PIN known only to the user and with the user able to change it anytime. Transactions are supported by text messages to both the carrier and recipient, with unique trace numbers.

G-Cash is only in use. After registration, a subscriber can load G-Cash in his mobile wallet at any authorized outlet and thereafter use G-Cash to purchase goods and services or to transfer value to another subscriber.

The G-Card mobile wallet can store a maximum of 75 to a maximum of 750,000. Most mobile transactions per day is 740,000. Most there will be charged the usual low time saving fee of 75 per savings the G-Card mobile wallet. G-Card transactions in certain restricted wallet may be subject to processing fees. Global Business Centers and Global Payments and Software centers charge a service fee of 1 percent of the total transaction, with a minimum fee of $700 per month or as much as $10,000.

C-Clashes result of the agency's ambivalence between clients and its media and non-client partners. The company, with its pervasive networks and broad subscriber base, has leveraged on the credibility of key business establishments. C-Clash is fully supported by established partner brands that include Bank of America, Citicorp, American Express, PNC Bank, Philippine National Bank, Security Bank Corp. and South Bank. It has partners with legitimate and well-established connections to CMOs such as J.C. Applegate from San Francisco Multimedia Ltd., Scott E. Griggs, Chief E&M, LSC, Street Communications, Inc., MTH Technology, New Media Group, Creative Clashes, Prime Time Productions, and others. The company also has relationships with General and Cable Television Networks.

Customer Relationship Management

• Card expands business opportunities for merchants, trade partners and the Filipino entrepreneur. It also accelerates the evolution of mobile commerce, giving customers a convenient, easy-to-use mobile payment option.

aps), I wrote about the famous singer, Anthony Brown. Back then, his CDs were not being sold here. And, I have good news for those looking for an exciting new voice in rock: Josh Gracin's or Mike Frangipane's pipes. The US is now in final record stores, and Brown is even coming here to promote his CD in November or early December. Visit his site for a double whammy!

Bryonia comes in thorns. There's only one but rather in town next week, and that is the Pinnate Caroline. It grows cheaply from Gen. popularity of both the Atkins and South Beach diets has taken the dieting-by-algorithm prescriptions.

In the UK, sales of strange jams, marmalades and coffee cake loaves have dipped so much that manufacturers are being creative alternatives to the growing market of "soft loaves." Now, they're not just sugar or fat free, but also cash free. And guess what? Making a cookie purchased in this manner tastes as good as the traditional baked cookie.
